The Special Issue “Religion and Change” covers a broad range of religious perspectives. As such, there is not a specific focus tying together all essays; rather, all contributions fall under the categorization of fluctuating religious paradigms. The development of various religious traditions surrounding doctrinal and ethical issues, Jewish messianism, metaphysics and phenomenology, reformation politics, and interreligious dialogue are all treated in this volume. The Orthodox Christian approach to religious and philosophical issues regarding healthcare and disability receives particular attention.
