This Reprint, based on the Special Issue "Papillomavirus - Induced Oncogenesis: Current Insights and Future Directions" published in the journal Viruses, brings together a curated collection of cutting-edge research articles, reviews, and short communications that explore the diverse and complex roles of human papillomaviruses (HPVs) in cancer development.

Covering a broad spectrum of topics—from viral immune evasion mechanisms and novel diagnostic biomarkers to global epidemiological trends and public health barriers—this volume provides a comprehensive overview of HPV-driven oncogenesis across multiple anatomical sites. Special attention is given to emerging research in molecular oncology, prevention strategies including vaccination, and implementation challenges in low- and middle-income settings.

Edited by Dr. G. Hossein Ashrafi and Prof. Mustafa Ozdogan, with editorial support from Assistant Guest Editor Muharrem Okan Cakir, this Reprint is an essential resource for virologists, oncologists, molecular biologists, epidemiologists, and public health professionals. It serves both as a state-of-the-art reference and a catalyst for future interdisciplinary collaboration to combat HPV-related cancers worldwide.
