

Religions

---

an Open Access Journal by MDPI

---

CiteScore: 1.3

Impact Factor: 0.6

Special Issue Reprint

The Role of Religion in Marriage and Family Life

Edited by: Urszula Dudziak

The creation of this reprint was prompted by the creation of a section in the journal Religions, entitled "The Role of Religion in the Life of Marriage and Family". It contains several peer reviewed articles. The authors are specialists in various fields and denominations. All of them, in different ways, show the value of religion for individuals and the relationships they establish. Religion accompanies people of different ages and in different life situations. It is support for engaged couples, spouses, and parents in preparing for marriage, in raising children, as well as in experiencing difficult moments, such as mourning the death of a loved one and preparing for one's own death. This reprint may be of interest to psychologists, theologians, sociologists, employees, and students of medical and nursing faculties, specialists in family sciences, as well as people preparing for family life and members of already established families, including grandparents. This reprint may prove useful in both private and professional life, in education and upbringing, in spiritual formation, and in politics.

