Our Book Types

Originals

We publish edited works, monographs, textbooks, project reports and series across the sciences (STEM), humanities and social sciences from authors and editors in all regions from early-career researchers, established academics and industry professionals. Books must be original content, not derivative of other works, fully referenced and must pass our rigorous standard for quality.

Academic textbooks authored to a high academic standard are a great source of information and are easy for teachers and students to use.

Edited books and monographs, particularly multidisciplinary, are well-suited for recording continuous scholarly endeavors.

Reprints

For all online content, MDPI Books provides the possibility to produce Reprints of a journal collection, such as Issue Reprints (Special Issue/Topical Collection/Topics/Proceedings), or simply a Selection of articles of your choice.

Issue Reprints are assigned an ISBN and DOI. Printed copies can be ordered on-demand via our website or from our partnering retailers. The Guest Editor receives one (1) complimentary print copy of the Issue to showcase at conferences or seminars and other contributors benefit from a discount on orders for colleagues, libraries or other interested groups or individuals.

With Selections, you can compile published articles from any MDPI journal into a Reprint. You can then download the book free of charge and purchase physical copies via print-on-demand.

Accordingly, Selections allow you to tailor content to your own needs and purposes:

- Promote a collection of articles by a select author
- Bring together teaching resources or an interdisciplinary book
- Create a yearbook with contributions from an institution
- Handouts for conferences, symposiums or meetings

Book and Chapter Processing Charges

The open access model relies on funding to cover publication costs, including editorial and production work, due to limited income-generating book sales. Funding typically comes from the author's university department or library, professional institution, industry sponsorship, charitable support or a national research grant. MDPI supports authors in looking for open access funding.

Editorial Process

Proposal

Authors/editors are asked to prepare a thorough publishing proposal.

mdpi.com/books/book-proposal

Quote and Agreement

Monograph authors are sent a non-binding price quote before the final agreement is drawn up and signed. Edited book chapters are subject to a standard fee.

Manuscript Preparation

MDPI provides guidelines and templates.

mdpi.com/books/publish\_with\_us

Submission

Manuscripts are submitted to and managed in our online submission system. A Book Production Editor guides authors through each step.

mdpibooks.jams.pub

Pre-Check

Manuscripts are checked for plagiarism, data falsification, reuse permissions for figures, inappropriate authorship credit, etc. Authors may be required to revise at this stage. For edited books, an Academic Editor checks each chapter before peer review.

Review

The Editorial Office coordinates peer review. A minimum of one review must be secured before a manuscript is accepted. If traditional external, independent peer review is not performed there will be a statement on the book webpage and the copyright page of the book.

Revision and Response

Authors are asked to correct issues identified by Editors and peer reviewers. There may be one or more review and feedback rounds. By default, reviewers who request major revisions or recommend rejection are sent the revised manuscript.

Publication Decision

An Academic Editor or Consultant makes an assessment based on the reviews, authors' response, and overall quality of the manuscript.

Invoicing

Once a manuscript has been officially accepted for publication (after pre-check, review and revision), the invoice is issued. The invoice is generally paid by the author, an institution or funder.

Formatting, Language Editing and Graphic Design

For all manuscripts accepted for publication, the Editorial Office carries out production – formatting, language editing and typesetting. Optional figure editing is also carried out at this stage.

Proofreading

Authors are asked to proofread their manuscripts and confirm the final proofs immediately prior to publication.

Book Indexing

Editors and monograph authors may add an index to their books. The book is sent to a professional indexer after final proofreading.

Publication

A book can be reviewed, edited, published, and ready to order in as little as 6 months. Our books can be downloaded at no cost or print copies purchased via our Online Library and established channel partners.
