Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Zoonotic Diseases (ISSN 2813-0227) is an online open access journal that was first published in 2021 and provides an advanced global forum for research on zoonotic diseases, allowing scientists to publish manuscripts regarding any fundamental or applied aspects of zoonotic diseases. Zoonotic Diseases publishes high-quality original research, review articles, brief reports, communications, and perspectives offering new insights into all aspects of zoonoses. Zoonotic Diseases is evolving in response to expansive and diverse research initiatives; it attempts to answer multiple complex questions, address challenges, and provide advances surrounding zoonoses, as well as meet the needs and interests of the scientific community.

Editor-in-Chief

Prof. Dr. Stephen K. Wikel

Aims

The aim of Zoonotic Diseases is to encourage the publication of experimental and theoretical results in as much detail as possible. Full experimental details and/or methods of study must be provided for research articles so that the results can be reproduced. All articles must be submitted with the necessary ethical approvals (please refer to the Ethical Guidelines for more information).
