Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Pandemics is an international open access journal on infectious disease pandemics, published quarterly online. The journal aims to cover all issues related to the emergence and global spread of highly virulent and/or contagious microorganisms from a “One Health” perspective, publishing both original and review articles. Short commentaries, perspectives, and communications will also be considered for publication.

As Editor-in-Chief, I am delighted to welcome you to follow our journal. Supported by an international community of scholars, reviewers, and editors, we provide an open access, peer-reviewed platform for disseminating high-quality research and fostering collaboration. We invite you to contribute your work and join us in shaping our future.

Editor-in-Chief

Prof. Dr. Giovanni Rezza

Aims

Pandemics (ISSN 3042-9323) is an international, open access journal dedicated to basic, microbiological, clinical, and epidemiological research on potentially pandemic pathogens, as well as to public health and socio-economic consequences of pandemic events. It publishes original research articles, reviews, and communications. There are no restrictions on the length of the papers. Our aim is to disseminate actionable knowledge in a rapidly and readily accessible manner to improve preparedness, response, and recovery strategies for current and future pandemics.

Scope

- Global outbreak dynamics and epidemiology
- Public health policies and pandemic preparedness
- Resource allocation strategies for pharmaceutical and non-pharmaceutical interventions
- Societal, psychological, and behavioral impact and recovery
- Policy and governance
- Technology and innovation, outbreak prediction and risk forecasting, surveillance tools
- Comparative analyses of past pandemics and their long-term effects
- Climate change and pandemics
- Media and communication in pandemic contexts
- One health approach
- Zoonotic and pre-pandemic vaccines
